Foreign policy, a complex arena, is generally influenced and propelled by the interests of the nation, strategic thinking and geo strategic calculations. As a rising regional and global power, India has equipped herself with new methods and strategies in keeping with the rising challenges of the present century.

The focus of post-cold war Indian foreign policy has shifted from idealism to realism, we now witness India making determined efforts to connect with her extended neighborhood in South East Asia, Asia Pacific, the Middle East, etc. Subsequent Indian governments have pursued substantial positive steps towards building close relationships with India's partners on the East. There is intensifying competition in the Asia Pacific due to its strategic and economic interests. The rise of CHINA has been a prominent focus of global discourse and contemplation. Maritime protection of Indian Ocean is increasingly significant for India at the time of Chinese initiative of Pearl of String. This became a focal point of security strategy not only in South Asia but also in South East Asia and Asia Pacific leading to stiff competition for power and influence. With a rapidly growing economy, military modernization and a prominent geostrategic location, India can play a key role not only in the neighborhood but also globally. There is no doubt, that India has arrived on the world stage and in this context India has reshaped her foreign policy and re-engaged with world politics. India's economic growth and increased ambition to play a significant role in global politics are the major factors behind this changing outlook.

The main challenge before our foreign policy makers is to reboot the process content and goals of India's foreign policy in a manner that strategically places the country's re-engagement with the international world. In this context the Department of Political Science Panamilly Memorial Government College Chalakudy is organizing a two day national seminar on "Great Power Dynamics : Prospects And Retrospects Of India's Foreign Policy"
